

The public should have the right to listen to any radio station it chooses, to take that service away would be a direct violation of my civil rights to choose the station I want to listen to. Whatever services the station provides, since it is a paid for service by the listners, should not be interrupted because of the greed of corperate America. The XM-Radio is not unlike the cable service provided to the public with access to local programming.Fred Brown